Unlike women, men's genitals deserved to be shamed. Now more and ever. They've never hesitated to weaponise their rape sticks against girls and women, impregnating them and spreading diseases. They do this because their penis is their source of pride, identity and reason to live. This is why men are so sensitive about it being insulted, or just not worshipped.

Penis-shaming might actually be a revolutionary solution if it becomes mainstream.

If men start having chronic low self-esteem and become insecure about their semen and penises (like women are with their vulvas) to the point of experiencing extreme distress from just the thought of showing it to anyone or having sex, then maybe that will stop the majority of future rapes from ever happening Lowering mens self esteem will cause much more rape to occur. The logic here is backwards.

I would also add that feminists can keep their advice for men to themselves. The overwhelming majority of them don't understand men one iota. That's probably one of the reasons they are feminists to begin with and why their input on how men should behave should be summarily dismissed with a condescending scoff. All of their advice is tailored to benefit themselves, not men.

I know its basically like that whole thing where old white men gived advice to women about the female body.

Men have been shamed for their penises for centuries already. When a man loses his virginity it's an accomplishment, something to be celebrated. However when a woman loses her virginity all of a sudden she is considered impure, unclean, dirty, filthy etc. etc. merely for having come into contact with a penis. This particular slight against men has been going on for a very long time.

the logic is so backwards. putting people down like that is detrimental to mental health, which probably will end up with more rape occurring.
