I told my sister to write an essay on the wage gap for her class & this is her professor's reply

Hi Jane,

First off, your premise is wrong. The wage gap is very real. So the reason why you are having this problem is because you will not find any sources that state this.

The way the wage gap works largely today is through the glass ceiling.

Perhaps you want to write your paper on the glass ceiling. You need to look at feminist sources on this issue. I would suggest beginning with Caroline Gatrell's book, Embodying Women's Work. Chapter 7 looks specifically at the glass ceiling.

Do NOT use business sources. They blame women. The reality is patriarchy.

You need to do a lot of research. Look at feminist sources on this issue. Feminists have been writing about the gender division of labour, the feminization of work, and the glass ceiling since the 1970s. There is a ton of feminist research on this topic.

So whatever you do don't look at the actual hard data or real numbers. Because that will mess with our confirmation bias. Make sure to only use documents that have no actual evidence and are completely anecdotal and biased.

This professor needs to be fired. I do not understand why there are not serious investigations being undertaken into garbage like this. They claim men are the issue and then state things like this.

Their sources are probably written by a crackhead.

I don't think Schools are the best places to put children for primary education nowadays it's full of moronic teachers who refuse to see the truth 1st of all it is illegal to discriminate in payments for the same work by the law if found so the company can be sued
