

It's so common, it's not even considered a big deal anymore. SMH

April 4, 2020 | 42 upvotes | by Bazinga212002

My brother was accused of rape

31,157 points • 1,242 comments • submitted 3 months ago by youalwayswin300 to r/teenagers

5

My brother is 17 and was doing a thing (sex) with his girlfriend (idk where) and they got caught. That bitch said my brother raped her, a total lie. His girlfriend is a nut, he already knew this but stayed with her for like 3 years, because apparently he felt like he needed to. However the accusation of rape didn't have enough evidence to hurt my brother (because he didn't do it). Things like this can ruin a man's life, all a woman has to say is a man raped her and for it to go public and their life is ruined. I think there should be punishment when a girl lies about rape. So it's all good I just wanted to share.

Archived from theredarchive.com

Comments

thenordiner • 1 point • 5 April, 2020 07:06 AM

Buddy this aint feminism thats rape

Bazinga212002[S] • 2 points • 5 April, 2020 08:23 AM

I'm sorry . I should have added the "false allegations" flair to help you realise what the post is all about.

thenordiner • 1 point • 5 April, 2020 08:23 AM

Feminists have nothing to do with rape allegations tho