

How Feminism Ruins Movies

February 1, 2020 | 209 upvotes | by Capman95

Archived from theredarchive.com

Comments

akihonj • 42 points • 1 February, 2020 05:42 PM

In a nutshell then, take a marginally successful film franchise put women as the lead characters make it a political statement about how women are always better and more virtuous than men, roll out the tired old tropes of girl power etc and then remove any semblance of originality for your message and expect people to sacrifice their earned money to sit down for two hours and have a slew of political bullshit rammed down their throats.

CMAGZZ • 8 points • 1 February, 2020 07:04 PM

□ □ □

Deicidelord • 2 points • 2 February, 2020 12:42 PM

thank you bro

Kelcan02 • 7 points • 2 February, 2020 07:15 AM

I just watched 1917 and that movie didn't have one badass female character. It was true to the age. Men were fighting the war while the women were in the towns with the children. In the only scene with a woman that speaks, she is hiding in fear from the German invaders. And is shown caring for a baby. They didn't show her fight. Instead, begged the main character to stay and hide with her. In that time period, women were mainly seen in the house. If the director made her go all black widow on the Germans just for the political statement, I would have walked out.

Should I repost this on r/feminism ?

Deicidelord • 2 points • 2 February, 2020 12:43 PM

Go on ! If you are bold enough

Kelcan02 • 3 points • 2 February, 2020 06:34 PM

I got banned □

Capman95[S] • 5 points • 1 February, 2020 08:55 PM

What are your thoughts on this analysis? I thought it made a lot of good points about an issue I've been thinking about a lot lately.

Deicidelord • 1 point • 2 February, 2020 12:44 PM

Good one

Lurkerbee56 • 8 points • 1 February, 2020 10:51 PM

I loved this analysis. It really articulated some of the myriad of reasons I hate movies like that.

kisuperf • 4 points • 2 February, 2020 04:17 AM i find it funny how the anti feminists of 2016 told the feminists to make their OWN films. now in the next decade they just hate on the films feminists have made on their own. as an anti feminist, i fuck with the facts, not the feelings

RyansPutter • 2 points • 2 February, 2020 08:29 AM

I don't have a problem with films that feature "action girls." Most people don't. Take 2005 horror film "The Descent," for example. The producers deliberately made all of the protagonists women. But there was no SJW bullshit. No girl power bullshit. It had a low budget, but was a box-office success. Despite what the media says, people will pay money to see movies that feature strong female characters. They just don't want franchises wrecked by shoving propaganda down their throats.

1Badshot • 4 points • 1 February, 2020 11:28 PM

Don't hold your breath. Many more "woke*" movies to go before Hollywood learns the lesson, and only after investors refuse to bankroll these hot vials of steaming box office poison.