

What? Who even thinks this?

November 18, 2019 | 285 upvotes | by Joraaah

Archived from theredarchive.com

Comments

the2ndexodus • 78 points • 18 November, 2019 07:34 PM

Quite the opposite actually username2136 • 52 points • 18 November, 2019 07:34 PM

Wow just when you thought the feminist ideology couldn't get any more delusional

Aauo2688 • 39 points • 18 November, 2019 08:33 PM

We focus way too much on "female pain!"

L_Lawliet___ • 23 points • 18 November, 2019 09:14 PM

Men are 80% of all suicides and yet this whore dares to say this

Boku_wa_kira_da • 2 points • 24 November, 2019 04:55 AM

Completely agreed

L_Lawliet___ • 1 point • 24 November, 2019 01:03 PM

Kira

Merlinfrost • -26 points • 18 November, 2019 09:39 PM

Uh I hate to burst your I hate feminism bubble, but if you ever say that quote in a debate you will lose. Although men are approx. 80% more likely to die considering most male suicides contain fire arms or more violent ways, women overall more likely to commit suicide than men by about 1%. Women usually commit suicide through medicinal overdose which is usually less violent and more likely to fail.

AlreadyDontLikeYou • 19 points • 18 November, 2019 11:44 PM

He said 80% of suicides are male. You are referring to failed and successful attempts. These are two separate data sets.

Merlinfrost • -10 points • 18 November, 2019 11:44 PM

No I'm saying his stat is referring to that 80% succeed.

Lickiecat • 15 points • 19 November, 2019 01:11 AM*

Women survive more because they are trying to get more attention. They aren't "committing suicide" when they take their overdose, they are self harming for attention most of the time. Men do this too.

-its worth noting this is purely statistical and not trivializing depression, self harm or suicide as all who do this need to get help and for some, that is exactly what it is a cry for.

KevinAndWinnie4Eva • 3 points • 19 November, 2019 02:32 PM

Meh, nobody hates actual feminism. People hate the faux pretend "feminism" the alt left and fanatics have latched onto the last few years.

In particular, the appropriation of WOMEN by MEN who claim to be "female" that's a biggy.

machevil • 2 points • 19 November, 2019 06:19 PM

Yeah, because a much larger portion of women who "commit suicide" do it for attention than men who commit suicide. Most men wanna fucking end it for real if they go far enough to attempt it.

Niki_Biryani • 1 point • 25 November, 2019 10:52 AM

Ohh god you are so uneducated on this topic. Those stats that show that women perform suicide 1% more often than men include self-harm in their definition of suicide. Eating a few Advils and calling an ambulance is not equivalent to blowing your brains out because there is no hope left for you. Educate yourself before you speak on such a sensitive topic:

https://www.reddit.com/r/MensRights/comments/cw7q2e/suicide_attempts_sex_and_the_lack_of_scientific/

ANIKAHirsch • 17 points • 18 November, 2019 09:09 PM

If anything it's taken more seriously. No one can stand to see a woman in distress — men and women alike.

hawknose33 • 11 points • 18 November, 2019 09:16 PM

The original post is very obviously about menstrual pain. Something that is supposed to happen to women. Yeah, it's an unpleasant experience. This happens every month or so. This is why it's not taken seriously. It's supposed to happen. If a woman and a man are both having eye pain, people will tell you to go to the doctor. If a young woman is complaining about her period pain, it's like dude haven't you had this for like 10 years now. You're not dying if you go to the doctor.

Zinziberruderalis • 1 point • 19 November, 2019 10:26 PM

Well I suppose doctors would sit up and take notice if a man complained of menstrual pain.

hawknose33 • 1 point • 20 November, 2019 04:19 PM

They'd sent him the psych ward probs.

read-a-lot • 10 points • 18 November, 2019 11:41 PM

So the reason that men's pain is taken more seriously is because we rarely display any outward signs of pain unless it's really fing bad and thus doctors take men more seriously when they complain. Additionally, men tend to have a higher pain tolerance and are just tougher than most women because we have done dumb/insane things and gotten hurt at a much greater rate than most women.

InformalCriticism • 10 points • 18 November, 2019 08:05 PM

Feminists believe that they're not being treated as medical patients the same way as men by doctors. There's some evidence to show that, but hardly enough to write about it.

AngelFire_3_14156 • 8 points • 18 November, 2019 07:38 PM

Huh? I thought all pain is taken seriously.

aAvocado62846 • 7 points • 18 November, 2019 09:46 PM

Honestly, male pain is not taken seriously. If something hurts u should just man up or don't be a pussy.

DrPVM • 4 points • 18 November, 2019 09:49 PM

The Telegraph as well, a conservative newspaper. I had been noticing this kind of shit creeping in before I canceled my subscription. The article that tipped the balance was the one about the 'gender commuter gap'.

Fucking madness.

[deleted] • 6 points • 18 November, 2019 09:55 PM

Have a look through my post history, you'll see a lot of liberal nonsense from the supposed "conservative" newspaper, very disappointing.

Cutthroatmom • 6 points • 19 November, 2019 03:11 AM

I work in a medical clinic. Not once, in 20 years, has a patient's complaint of pain been disregarded or left untreated because of the patient's sex.

Mick_Donalds • 7 points • 18 November, 2019 09:51 PM

"I need period leave from work. Every month. And I have months where it's 6 or 7 days. I should be paid the exact same as my male counterparts."

[deleted] • 2 points • 19 November, 2019 05:11 AM

My ex girlfriend had nearly debilitating period cramps, I could understand her taking off work for it. My current girlfriend has normal period cramps, I don't think taking off work for cramps has even crossed her mind.

Mick_Donalds • 1 point • 19 November, 2019 12:15 PM*

As an employer, I would make her take an unpaid leave of absence for it. Why would I pay someone the same as everyone else if they have debilitating medical issues that affect their output of work/productivity? Why would I even hire that person to begin with?

[deleted] • 1 point • 19 November, 2019 05:17 PM

If she had paid time off saved up why not use it? As an employer you can't make her do anything, she can decide if she wants to take paid or unpaid leave for it herself

Mick_Donalds • 1 point • 19 November, 2019 05:38 PM

I damn sure wouldn't pay her to take additional days of leave per month just because she has debilitating medical issues. How is that fair to the rest of the workforce? Sure, she could use her paid time off, but there's a limit to that in most workplaces too. I'd get around it by just not retaining a person who can't make it to work and be punctual. Any smart employer would.

[deleted] • 1 point • 19 November, 2019 06:44 PM

Is it fair to the rest of the workforce for me to take a vacation in the middle of the holiday season? How would taking medical leave be any different?

julianleung • 2 points • 19 November, 2019 07:13 AM

I need to visit prostitute 6 or 7 times a month. I think it should be subsidized.

Joemac_ • 4 points • 19 November, 2019 05:04 AM

Man gets kicked in the balls

Lol funii

Woman gets kicked in the crotch

Omg no so violent pontiflexrex • 2 points • 19 November, 2019 09:33 AM

Men psychological pain is less likely to be treated. Women physical pain is less likely to be treated. Both are true.

Why are most commenters turning it into a feminist issue, both truth are widely documented! Sources that point at bias toward men's mental health are the same that will tell you that women-specific pains are often being ignored.

MAGA-TIME • 3 points • 19 November, 2019 12:04 AM

It's literally the opposite. When females are in pain people will always ask them if they are okay or what to do to help. If men are in pain they will just be told to man up.

aroh100876 • 2 points • 19 November, 2019 02:13 AM

There's a whole month dedicated to breast cancer for God's sake.

[deleted] • 2 points • 19 November, 2019 12:49 AM

Feminists think this tw1nm3t30r • 2 points • 19 November, 2019 07:43 AM

Because a man works harder.

TrannysNeedPimozide • 1 point • 19 November, 2019 05:10 PM

"Man up"

"take it like a man"

"be a man about it"

Literally the opposite of reality

rockgodx • 1 point • 20 November, 2019 03:10 AM

This is literally the opposite of true... I work in the emergency center and tons of men are near disregarded before they are seen. The symptoms that men face for abdominal symptoms are much less significant in pointing to a serious issue in comparison to women. Like if a dude comes in with flank pain, it's completely less serious than men. Like some women think ordering pregnancy tests when they claim they can't be pregnant is some kind of "demeaning" or "not being taken seriously". It's pretty important to check because it could cause symptoms or worsen symptoms or mean that the situation is of differing variability.

MajesticSpaceCat • 1 point • 2 December, 2019 03:08 PM

Tell me that when women make up 76% of suicides.

cowyeti • 1 point • 18 November, 2019 10:02 PM

It's true. <https://youtu.be/TATSAHJKRd8>

TrannysNeedPimozide • 1 point • 19 November, 2019 05:10 PM

John Oliver

No, it isn't. In fact, that's just lying propaganda.

cowyeti • 1 point • 19 November, 2019 11:05 PM

Care to elaborate?

VNyall • 0 points • 19 November, 2019 06:38 AM

This was probably written by a woman who complained about little aches and pains to her boyfriend and he started getting annoyed by it after a while

julianleung • 0 points • 19 November, 2019 07:04 AM

Our pain, is that we are programmed to chase after you.