

Feminists silence logic and facts:

August 27, 2019 | 139 upvotes | by RXelaH1984

How to decrease the amount of overall rape which plagues the general populace (of peculiar countries):

In Japan, they have the lowest sexual assault/rape charge history due to one key factor. They charge female prosecutors (female rapists) the same that they would charge a male persecutor. Moreover, the children that are raped by these women grow to commit harassment, assault, and rape charges themselves. America has laws that protect women, even female rapists (males receive 60% more jail time, females are put into more comfortable situations, the media doesn't spread awareness over this issue so it gets less publicity due to the feminist movement). Feminism has vouched that 'all men are rapists' and 'females shouldn't be considered rapists' due to them being 'oppressed.'

What they hide from the populace is that female perpetrators are more common (more than 60% of free rapists are females, 90% of jailed rapists are males). Furthermore, feminism uses propaganda to promote their ideology of victimhood and narcissistic beliefs to the female populous, hoping to recruit women to discriminate against the male populace. An interesting fact is sexual assault and rape aren't synonymous, they're similar, albeit not synonymous. Sexual assault lacks substantial aspects that rape does, the most prominent is that rape is forceful sexual intercourse and sexual assault can be flirtatious remarks or actions. Getting back to Japan, they have a system where women have to suffer for their crimes, equally to a man.

By doing so, they're limiting the amount of plausible rapists by punishing, discouraging, and publicizing female offenders. If America were to follow by similar rules, women would hav to pay the same price that a man would for their crime, thus limiting the amount of harm they can do.

Archived from theredarchive.com

Comments

JosephND • 9 points • 27 August, 2019 06:39 PM

I'm all for female rapists receiving equally measured treatment as male rapists, but presenting this as "Japan has low rape because of this one weird trick!" Is overly simplistic and ignores the fact that there are dozens or hundreds of other variables at play.

RXelaH1984[S] • 3 points • 27 August, 2019 06:52 PM

You're correct, albeit this variable is one of the substantial ones that contribute to Japan's low rape quantity. Japan discourages and seeks action to decrease the amount of rape cases, it has taken procedures that America hasn't or has yet to take.

[deleted] 27 August, 2019 04:50 PM*

[deleted]

RXelaH1984[S] • 2 points • 27 August, 2019 05:01 PM

<https://www.scientificamerican.com/article/sexual-victimization-by-women-is-more-common-than-previousl-y-known/>

[deleted] 27 August, 2019 05:10 PM*

[deleted]

RXelaH1984[S] • 3 points • 27 August, 2019 05:14 PM

It's the average number of free female rapists. There are more exclusions for female charges than male, females have a shorter prison time which makes them more likely to commit the crime again, and other variables such as how women that rape men sometimes get off with lesser charges (sexual assault or harassment). I used the 58% statistic and added more variables to the equation, I got around a 4% increase. Not very substantial, albeit still worth mentioning.

Angelotheprodigy • 3 points • 27 August, 2019 04:24 PM

Preach!

123croissants • 1 point • 27 August, 2019 10:52 PM

Who woulda thought

The_Invader_Kilz • 1 point • 28 August, 2019 04:59 PM

I take issue with the article describing tape as "forceful".

Rape is a crime of consent, or lack thereof.

A penetrated B's mouth, vagina or anus without B's consent and A does not reasonably believe that B consented to A's penetration.

Most rape is not forceful, it is heavy pressure, coercion, blackmail or merely not stopping in the heat of the moment. That is what constitutes rape, and force is not a factor.

RXelaH1984[S] • 0 points • 28 August, 2019 05:01 PM

Would you want or be willing to get raped by an unattractive women?

The_Invader_Kilz • 1 point • 29 August, 2019 10:07 AM

No. Why would someone ask such a thing? If I do not consent, it does not matter if it's a man or a woman - attractive or otherwise.

RXelaH1984[S] • 1 point • 29 August, 2019 12:25 PM

Than it's forceful. Rape is forceful in nature . Whether or not you can resist, the individual is still being forced into the situation, aren't they?

The_Invader_Kilz • 1 point • 29 August, 2019 12:59 PM

No, it's more an issue of control than force, but the definition of rape is solely about penetration without consent.

RXelaH1984[S] • 1 point • 29 August, 2019 02:19 PM

By that definition, only the male populace can rape then. Rape can be defined as sexual intercourse without proper consent, with force.

The_Invader_Kilz • 1 point • 29 August, 2019 02:32 PM

You are correct. By legal definition in the UK (rightly or wrongly), only men are capable of rape, because only men possess a penis. If a woman forces you to penetrate or penetrates with an object, that is not rape.