Rapists protected by loophole? These people are nuts. But this thinking is probably pretty typical.

Just don't have sex with them.

Nothing kills a boner faster than thinking about how you'll potentially face rape charges. It makes sex completely pointless, unenjoyable and actually something you don't want to do.

I wonder if some women I "check out" are aware that I'm not checking them out sexually. I'm assessing how much damage they might do and whether they're the type to do it.

Kind of like when women "check men out" and guys think she's into them, when really she's assessing his assets, what he can do for her and what kind of threat he is.
