Nearly all feminist subreddits are like that. They don't want their ideas to be ridiculed in fear that their beliefs will be deconstructed.

Just say you've identified as a woman before the conversation began.

Pro-porn and pro-prostitution? What?

Legalizing brothels would be one of the best things you can do for women.

/r/gendercritical is a radical feminist sub. Most of them hate transgenders (because it's a plot by men to appropriate the female body or something) are against sex workers (because prostitutes are brainwashed by the patriarchy), against porn (because it's sexist) and against BDSM. (because it supposedly normalizes abuse)

So they are the crazy ass sex negative feminists.

Porn is sexist against women? The dude is reduced to little more than a cock 99% of the time.
