This tragedy took place in Korea. I'll briefly summarize the story in English

A group of middle school girls falsely accused a male teacher of sexual harassment. The teacher was immediately fired from school, and had gone under heavy investigation by the office of education/police. Word spread across the whole country, calling him a savage sex offender. Going through months of depression and mental illness, the man committed suicide. Months after his death, he is found innocent. The female students writes a letter of apology, and are not pressed any type of charges. The office of education denies taking responsibility for his death

Middle school girls do that now, I don't even want to live now knowing this happens so often within all ages of girls.
