TOXIC FEMININITY: Catfights over handbags and tears in the toilets. When this producer launched a women-only TV company she thought she'd kissed goodbye to conflict...

Toxic femininity - Dismissing the silly sexist trope that if women are in majority power they would create utopias. Gender balance is of course good, but the notion of women together would create utopias is as absurd (female dominated professions and environments are often hell) as it is sexist.

Read article above about what happened when a woman created her utopia of a female only work place.

This post is not meant to say women are bad. It is simply posted to highlight the stupid sexist tropes going around about how all ills in the world and wars etc are made by men (conveniently forgetting war isn't a male decision; women vote to go to war just as much as men, and even shame men who don't fight e.g. white feather that even the suffragettes took part in; the difference being women vote FOR MEN to actually go and fight and leave the women and children alone. Also conveniently forgetting that if men are resole for war, then they are responsible for almost all invention, exploration (new continents, oceans, mountains, deserts, arctic), innovations, social change and progress, art, music, science etc.

It challenges the notion that "if women ruled it, the world would be an ideal utopia, toxic masculinity will not be there to harm males and others around them,etc. I mean this idea has also been put forward by Barack Obama!

Also I would like to point out that female dominated institutions that exist right now are far from utopias:

NURSING - known for large amounts of bullying culture, shaming, even racism, and tribal nature

OBGYN, PAEDS -> female dominated specialties that have many institutional problems. Some of the highest attrition / drop out / burnout rates compared to all medical specialities (PAEDS is often the sociality with highest dropouts in many countries and this along with OBGYN has the most lawsuits)

SCHOOLS -> Considering most women are primary caregivers and most boys and girls don't see a single male teacher until high school I am surprised feminists are not blaming more social ills on women raising children... not that they should, but the blame men for everything else... and this also goes against the idea of patriarchy... it is women controlling the kids and teaching them... that aside, there is a crisis in the school system which has been for long female dominated sector

NUNS -> abuse, even torture, bullying, cliques

FEMINISM -> in civil war constantly, TERFs, Equity feminists, Choice feminists, Intersectionalists (the various intersections even fight among each other). Women are regularly kicked out of feminist groups, and "no platformed" which means they are blocked from speaking, often violently. Even given death and rape threats (e.g. CHS, Erin Prizzey - who should be a hero of their but has been completely kicked out feminism)

Learn more about toxic femininity here. Please note I do not personally like the gendering of a term like this as it represent bad behaviour that either gender can do - yes it is primarily female, but it can be anyone. One again though for balance, to the argument of toxic masculinity (which is a stupid term a it merely represent bad behaviour not gendered behaviour)

Thanks for the post. Looks interesting. Just some advice. Your text could use a proof read. Got a few spelling errors and muddled up sentences that if corrected would make this a quality post.

Edit: spelling error - how ironic.

I hope people see content, get ideas and use that to make their own content, or repost the content, even copy and paste and edit my posts if they please as their own posts and threads, with their own take on the issue... which is good as I see that happening.... but yeah anyone free to take any of my content and reword it as they like as their own work.

Nah, that's not an excuse. If you can't take the time to do it right, don't do it. It's not respecting the people who do take the time to spell and grammar check. Plus we don't want to read something that is poorly written. Going back later is not how it works.

Woman here and yeah no one is a woman's worst enemy than other woman. Female bullying happens so much and often goes into adulthood at the workplace or at PTA meetings. Even mothers can bully and jealous of their daughters and it all completely ruins a girls/woman's self image and self esteem but society only looks at these issues as "Men need to fix it and stop doing it" even though women are the main ones who do it to other women.

I remember in elementary through high school, girls would always get mad at me and find a way to ruin my day. In elementary school, two of the more popular girls in my class stood at my desk and kept throwing insults at me and making fun of things like my sideburns (something I loved and still have today) and in middle school another girl made fun of my hairy legs and my sister always pointed out things like my big feet (which are pale because I never leave the house without sneakers or socks on because I'm self conscious about it).

Women can ultimately destroy you mentally but society doesn't want to acknowledge it or tries to downplay/excuse it. You can't even talk about it in female only circles.

It's so funny some people think that corruption is tied to gender ..

love how they say "women are better, men are toxic", but having an all female staff, not only is sexist, but proabably the most toxic environment you're gonna have. At least men would punch each other, then go for a beer after.

If not for men, we'll still be stuck in stone age...
