Not so fun fact: men DON'T die from suicide more frequently because they don't know how to cry. They are just more successful at completing suicide as they tend to use more lethal methods. Women actually attempt suicide more but are less successful.

And only more successful, not out of dedication, but because they use brutal methods. Women tend to use methods with less violent means because they think about whoever might find them. Men tend not to care

Yup, women tend to try not to traumatise others with their suicide.

False. Some women just use 'suicide' as a call to attention.

Tomato Sauce

As far as I remember, sometimes a "suicide attempt" is a convoluted form of asking for help. A resolute mind will commit suicide because s/he already knows (?) there is no help.

women use suicide as a call to attention... men use suicide as a method to end suffering. huge fucking difference.
