

Somebody at r/feminism linked to an article that talked about how many times women were harassed in Twitter. The comment below is what got me banned from the sub:

48 upvotes | 20 December, 2018 | by aroh100876

Study: Women Are Abused on Twitter Every 30 Seconds

in r/Feminism

aroh100876

32 · 18h · (15h)

Two things missing:

- Who is harassing them? Or did they just assume everybody harassing them was a male?
- What are the statistics for men? You can't put this in context without that information.

Archived from theredarchive.com

Comments

GooseMan126 • 6 points • 20 December, 2018 12:30 PM

Proof that feminists can't have a reasonable debate. I literally got banned from AskFeminists for asking what they thought about threats of violence against men by saying it happens at very low rates. It's almost like if something isn't incredibly common, we don't need to use that as our main argument.

aroh100876[S] • 6 points • 20 December, 2018 01:06 PM

Lol lmao thanks that made my morning. Nope, you were banned for consistently posting from an uneducated perspective. You should have read our sidebar rules. Feel free to use r/AskFeminists though. Happy learning and have a great day! No further communication is welcome. :)

I guess uneducated perspective actually means truths we don't like to listen to.

KyokoG • 1 point • 20 December, 2018 05:10 PM

So, on a sub explicitly called AskFeminists, it's a cause for banning if you don't know the things they think you should know?

The further left these women get, the more they start to sound like a bad 1970s parody of the housewife who won't tell her husband what she wants then makes him sleep on the couch when he can't guess.

[deleted] • 2 points • 22 December, 2018 03:51 PM

This is why nobody can take that sub seriously. In fact there's almost no point in modern feminism in the 21st Century.