So because a person is only qualified for a particular job they deserve to be placed in a vulnerable position? They deserve to have to unbutton their top few buttons in order to get a decent living for the evening because it's the only way creepy old guys will tip anything?

Okay but if literally everyone refused to do said jobs what would happen to the entire industry? What about people who live in tourist driven areas who have very little job options besides service? Why are you arguing something like that ☐

Like I said, there are some people who only qualify for those jobs so obviously there will always be someone to do the job. Not to mention, teenagers are able to do those jobs. But as an adult, don't complain about having that job if that's all you qualify for. That's your fault.
