We live in a society where 99% of the criminals come from distorted families. A huge majority of them raised by single mothers. Yet we praise the very notion of single motherly hood.

I can understand why, and it is important that these mothers are treated fairly. However the very notion of biology suggests that it is very important for a child to have both a father figure and a mother figure. A mother can simply not be both.

Men and Women are fundamentally different creatures at the end of the day with different biological outlook to life. Hence why we have different roles. Equality can only flourish once we as human beings understand our strengths and weaknesses and use those to our advantages.

Judge a fish on its abilities to climb a tree and it'll forever think its useless. It Will struggle to cope with its community and face major depressions. However judge it on its ability to swim and you'll see many benefits thereafter.

Excellent points. There is a YouTube video of a woman, Katy Faust, who was raised by lesbians and she is speaking out against children being raised by same sex couples, specifically two mothers in her case.

She even says that her mother was a great mother and also compliments her mother's partner but then she goes on to say that despite them being wonderful people, neither of them can be a father. She ends up saying that children should have the right to have relationships with both their mothers and fathers.

Of course, I suspect she received backlash from the typical groups, but you can tell that she is very adamant about her stance and seems disappointed by her lack of a relationship with her biological father. It's crazy that we live in such times where it's a radical idea that men and women are biologically different and serve different, equally important functions in raising children.
