Women more Violent in Relationships than Men: New Study finds

Chromosomes, Domestic Violence, News

Contrary to the overwhelming perception in society, numerous studies and statistics recently published from a variety of disparate sources have indicated that women are more likely to be verbally and physically aggressive to their partners than men, and are increasingly participating in serious acts of violence against other men, women, the elderly and children.

Dr Elizabeth Bates from the University of Cumbria and colleagues from the University of Central Lancashire gave 1104 students (706 women and 398 men) questionnaires about their physical aggression and controlling behaviour, towards partners and to same-sex others (including friends).

Women were revealed to be more likely to be physically aggressive to their partners, and men were more likely to be physically aggressive to their same-sex partners.

Women were also shown to engage in greater levels of controlling behavior, which is understood to be a predictor of physical aggression in both sexes.

"This was an interesting finding," Dr Bates says. "Previous studies have sought to explain male violence towards women as rising from patriarchal values, which motivate men to seek to control women's behaviour, using violence if necessary."

"This study found that women demonstrated a desire to control their partners and were more likely to use physical aggression than men."

"It wasn't just pushing and shoving," Dr Bates said, of responses to the anonymous questionnaires. "Some people were crying the boxes for things like beating up, kicking, and threatening to use a weapon."

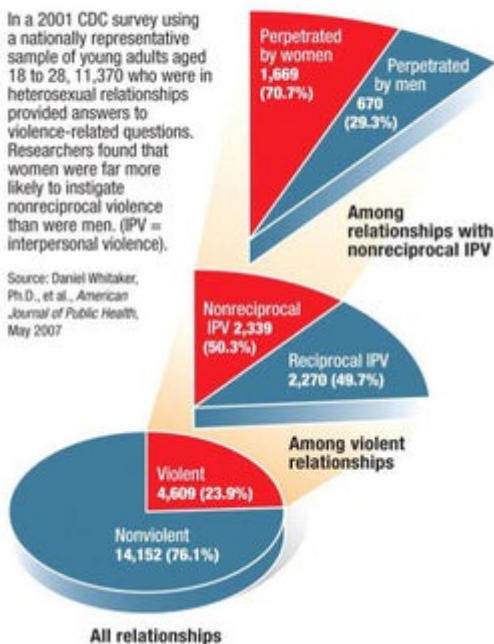

"The feminist movement made violence towards women something we talk about yet still ignore violence towards men."

In another finding in Australia, the number of men who report experiencing domestic violence from their current partner has almost doubled since 2005, according to a new survey released last week by the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS).

Women Often the Aggressors

In a 2001 CDC survey using a nationally representative sample of young adults aged 18 to 28, 11,370 who were in heterosexual relationships provided answers to violence-related questions. Researchers found that women were far more likely to instigate nonreciprocal violence than were men. (IPV = interpersonal violence).

Shhhh, the feminists and simps might get upset with these facts.

Wildhouse83 • 20 points • 8 April, 2021 12:32 AM

I am afraid, they do not care about facts.

Cursedwithknowing • 16 points • 8 April, 2021 01:26 AM

The care a great deal about covering up facts. Facts interfere with their propaganda.

Phantom_Spark • 2 points • 8 April, 2021 01:56 PM

Today's females often ignore all facts. It's irrelevant. They only care about what feels good or what impacts her specifically.

HandsomeJack44 • 6 points • 8 April, 2021 06:06 AM

Of course they will.

13%, 99.6%, this manner of Science is on the way to being illegal.

Odd-Reference-32 • 2 points • 8 April, 2021 12:07 PM

Now you're getting it!

gentle_lemon • 24 points • 8 April, 2021 12:13 AM

Can confirm. My ex-wife was a raging violent bitch, and popped me a couple times. Left me with a black eye one time. Had to play that off at work for a couple weeks. :-/

psylikik • 15 points • 8 April, 2021 01:09 AM

You didn't leave her immediately? Was this before red pill?

gentle_lemon • 19 points • 8 April, 2021 01:57 AM

Sadly, I put up with her shit for a decade longer than I should have.

Never. Again.

cryptotelemetry • 21 points • 8 April, 2021 02:18 AM

There's no consequences for women so they are emboldened. I'm sure they're more abusive towards children too.

AmirIsBack • 15 points • 8 April, 2021 05:21 AM

Yeah duh. My mom throws stuff, hits people stabbed me(with a butterknife so it just broke in 2 when hitting me, not doing any damage) breaks things to punish us.

My dad once gave her a slap after she threw his phone against him and it ended up with the police picking him up. Women can be as violent as they want and just get away with it in our shit society.

Read an article in which a mainland Chinese mother had cut her son's cock off.

<https://www.straitstimes.com/asia/east-asia/woman-cuts-off-sons-penis-to-get-back-at-husbands-family-reports>

Seriously, mainland chinese mothers can be pretty scary.

Curious_Oogway • 10 points • 8 April, 2021 02:48 AM

How dare you to tell the facts?

Putrid-Beyond-2494 • 9 points • 8 April, 2021 05:57 AM

Does not surprise me. One of my ex's seemed like the shiest, sweetest girl, but after 2 years of dating she was trying to throw punches (I didn't stand for it and just grabbed her arms).

As a man, violence is a part of life. Meaning, no matter how peaceful we desire to live, we have to come to terms of it as an ugly necessity if a threat emerges. However, us men know to use restraint with LOVED ones.

According to these statistics, women don't give a shit.

bft2 • 5 points • 8 April, 2021 08:14 AM

It's pretty obvious that this is the case if you look at all the headlines as of late. It's always some wymyn doing insane shit and getting away with it. Which means the unreported DV is even worse.

Just look how wymyn behave now. They're basically 1:1 representatives of "toxic masculinity". Loud mouthed, chip on the shoulder, drinks, swears like a sailor and of course, violent because they know they get away with it.

gantz_au • 6 points • 8 April, 2021 08:53 AM

I've seen so many men abused by their partners and they can't do anything about it. They're totally defeated.

Putrid-Beyond-2494 • 4 points • 8 April, 2021 04:28 AM

Sadly these facts and statistics will be ignored by the feminists + media + politicians, much like the ones disproving the gender pay myth

Teflon08191 • 3 points • 8 April, 2021 11:52 AM

Women direct their violence primarily towards two groups: Men who won't fight back, and children.

greyman0425 • 3 points • 8 April, 2021 12:38 PM

True, same goes for verbal abuse.

Problem with fighting back physically, you will get arrested.

In many jurisdictions even if you have evidence that she hit you and you did nothing you get arrested.

Odd-Reference-32 • 1 point • 8 April, 2021 02:27 PM

It's as if they're the actions of a coward or something.

Phantom_Spark • 2 points • 8 April, 2021 01:55 PM

How was this information allowed to come out? Did they try to fire or attack the college and researchers?

I ask because Erin Pizzey tried to relay this same information as she attempted to open a shelter for men. She already was helping women. Yet the moment the information came out that battered wife is a myth and women are equally or more violent than men... she was stalked and received death threats.

MrA_H0Ie • 2 points • 8 April, 2021 03:16 PM*

Don't trust anything that's based on surveys.

People lie. All the time. They don't become saints when they fill out a survey.

If the information about violence doesn't come from police statistics, ignore it.

With this survey you can only guess how many of them downplayed the severity of their own actions and they exaggerate the severity of actions against them. Women ALWAYS lie about that, even in a court room.
