

He thinks women will accept him being a househusband

May 23, 2020 | 1 upvotes | by leopardinstinct

---

r/MuslimMarriage

u/sufyaan05 • 4h • M - Looking

+ Join

There's nothing wrong with wanting to be a housewife/househusband and nothing more, Nothing.

Personal Thoughts

The two most important women in my life are also the best parents in my life. Those are my sister and my mother.

Both of them have many things in common but for the purpose of this post, the biggest thing is that both of them are housewives to their husbands and kids. Now my sister does bake on the side but that aside both her and my Mother have ever wanted to be anything more than what they are. They are both happy and love their kids and husbands.

There is a lot of negativity on this sub (some of to rightfully so, some maybe not) about bad parents or bad relationships with parents. I come from a Desi household, my mother barely speaks English yet our family is entirely functional. I just needed to put it out there that we aren't all as bad as people might think.

---

Comments

---

leopardinstinct 5 points 23 May, 2020 01:44 AM

Again this shows how boys are raised as defective girls, his parents are his mom and his sister so he has NO male influence in his life. This is why the blue pill is dangerous, poor guy believes in equalitarian marriage but doesn't know that women are hypergamous. Appealing to the feminine to the extent he becomes feminine isn't going to attract women, men and women are very different.

Beyondthet 5 points 23 May, 2020 01:47 AM

You know, it's becoming more and more apparent to me that Muslims don't understand Islam properly. They only focus on halal and haram and even with that they ONLY SCRATCH THE SURFACE. However, one thing hardly none of them appreciate and understand is the hikmah of Allah. Allah has prescribed each gender role for a purpose. The man is told to be the provider because a stay at home husband just wouldn't work. No woman will accept or be happy with that because it shows that the male is low value and weak and women like strong men. I mean, why is height so important to women? Because they want their man to have a strong aura. A stay at home husband is anything but that.

leopardinstinct 2 points 23 May, 2020 01:55 AM

Exactly, it's clear stated that men are the providers but their belief in gender equality as per feminism means that she can be the provider and he can be the raiser. "it doesn't matter because equality means we can be anything" is what they believe in

Beyondthet 3 points 23 May, 2020 02:00 AM

This is why al-taddabur (ponderance) of the verses of the Qur'an and Sunnah is so important. Allah has made things the way they are for a reason. Sometimes we can look at the world and understand the hikmah of Allah behind the verses and sometimes there are things like Qadar which we cannot fully understand through our human mind. However, it is necessary upon us as Muslims to do al-taddabur and ponder deeply over the verses to look for Allah's signs. And in this instance it is very apparent that Allah has made the male gender providers and protectors because that's what women naturally desire in a man. This makes the marriage harmonious and fruitful. Not a stay at home husband. This would never work because that's not what women want or are naturally attracted to.

leopardinstinct 2 points 23 May, 2020 02:05 AM

□, all agendas pushed are there against our nature, all these are signs of an end of a civilization

Beyondthet 3 points 23 May, 2020 02:12 AM

You know, I'll tell you where the problem starts. The problem starts when Muslims say, "Ohh men are usually the providers but if the husband and wife can work something out and the husband stays at home and she works, that's fine." I mean, they just look for baseline permissibility and impermissibility. When the truth of the matter is, what if you and your wife work something out that is permissible but it fails and costs you your entire marriage? The Qur'an and Sunnah was never supposed to be understood like that. Rather Muslims ought to understand why Allah made men protectors and providers over women in the first place. Like what is the wisdom behind that? The wisdom is that's what women naturally desire in a man and this is the Quranic model. If you go against the Quranic model fine, but don't be surprised if your marriage fails because Allah has told you the way marriage is supposed to work but you didn't listen. There is wisdom behind everything Allah says. It's not just a simple matter of "well, working things out together is permissible so it's fine." No. Allah has told you about male and female nature and how marriage is supposed to work. So you should understand it, appreciate it and follow it.

muslimthot 1 points 23 May, 2020 08:46 PM

You know, it's becoming more and more apparent to me that Muslims don't understand Islam properly.

This has been the case for a while now. Instead of referring to our highest example - Prophet Muhammed PBUH we have adopted shaytani/dajjalica ideology.

I have no idea why a man would want to be a househusband. Can a man breast feed babies? Can a man physically carry a baby for 9 months in their body and deliver the baby? No.

All of this leads back to deeply severe imbalance in our community. There's plenty of hadeeth of the Prophet PBUH helping his family around the household but when the time for prayer came that household nonsense was dropped and the prayer was done.