

AWALT: Then, Now, and Forever

1 upvotes | 1 June, 2021 | by Cursedwithknowing

---

I know there are trad-cucks out there that think that all we must do is return to the 1950s, and all will be well with the world. Their theory is based on the assumption that feminism has ruined women, and turned them into the shrieking harpies that they are today. MGTOW men know the truth. We know that AWALT is reality. We know that feminism is nothing more than a manifestation of unfettered hypergamy. It's the truest form of a woman. Women were always like that; always have - always will be. In those idyllic 1950s, society controlled hypergamy with a healthy dose of shame. If a woman acted on our hypergamy she would look be looked down upon. On the flip side, being a "proper" mother and wife were praised and honored. And, considering that women are acutely susceptible to social pressure, they at least partly complied. It's a probability that many cheated, lied and did all the things we observe today. They were just extremely discreet in their behavior.

To look at this, a walk through of history is needed. Here are three specific examples; Two from the past and one that is current.

Example 1: Salem Witch Trials.

The infamous Salem witch trials began during the spring of 1692, after a group of young girls in Salem Village, Massachusetts, claimed to be possessed by the devil and accused several local women of witchcraft. As a wave of hysteria spread throughout colonial Massachusetts, a special court convened in Salem to hear the cases; the first convicted witch, Bridget Bishop, was hanged that June. Eighteen others followed Bishop to Salem's Gallows Hill, while some 150 more men, women and children were accused over the next several months.

...

In January 1692, 9-year-old Elizabeth (Betty) Parris and 11-year-old Abigail Williams (the daughter and niece of Samuel Parris, minister of Salem Village) began having fits, including violent contortions and uncontrollable outbursts of screaming.

...

In late February, arrest warrants were issued for the Parris' Caribbean slave, Tituba, along with two other women—the homeless beggar Sarah Good and the poor, elderly Sarah Osborn—whom the girls accused of bewitching them.

So, several young women come forward with absurd accusations. Since the first accusations were believed, and the girls got attention for it, other women came forward to gain some of that attention for themselves.

Also note that the people accused were of a lower class. A slave, a beggar, and a post war impoverished person. It's as if they were seen as being less than human, and unworthy of living. Is this not how modern women treat men who are not in the top 10-20%?

So, young women and girls used the existing power structure (Christian Puritanism) to get rid of people they didn't like while garnering sympathy and attention for themselves.

Example 2: Lynching in the Jim Crow South

Thousands of innocent black men were killed in the south. Many were hunted down, brutally abused, and unmercifully hung with no legal rights, for allegedly "raping" white women. For example, Emmitt Till was brutally murdered for allegedly sexually harassing a white woman, and his would be accuser came forward decades later to say she lied about it.

But at the trial, she testified — without the jury present — that Emmett had grabbed her hand, she pulled away, and he followed her behind the counter, clasped her waist, and, using vulgar language, told her that he had been with white women before.

“She said that wasn’t true, but that she honestly doesn’t remember exactly what did happen,” Dr. Tyson said in an interview on Friday.

Ms. Donham, now 82, could not be reached for comment.

Several years ago, I had read an article about a woman that lied about multiple separate attacks by black men, and got 6 men lynched. I cannot find the article anymore. I think it was memory-holed after the #metoo movement became prominent.

The question becomes, how many innocent black men were put to death due to the lies of women?

In this example, women used the existing power structure (racism) to cover for their cheating behavior, or to just get rid of people that they saw as being less than human.

Example 3: #metoo Witch Hunts

Since society has become so gynocentric, we are now watching the undoing of our entire culture due to unrestrained female nature. Part of the feminist power grab is the #metoo movement, which seeks to remove men from positions of power via false accusation and replace these men with women. They also make false accusations to protect their own reputation and cover for cheating and other typical female behaviors. We have seen men like Bill Cosby go to prison with no evidence whatsoever presented against them. We have seen men like Johnny Depp, who possesses overwhelming evidence that he was abused, lose his career. His abuser is instead rewarded with more roles, fame, and grants to discuss domestic violence (Why not? She is an expert at it!). We had the “mean girls” story, in which a group of HS girls plotted to falsely accuse a male classmate. His crime? They didn’t like him. They ruined his life, and when the truth came out, there were no consequences for his false accusers. Even when the family of the boy attempted to sue, the case was thrown out. We see the examples of all the college men, that even though there is abundant evidence of consent, were thrown out of their universities and blacklisted. I could go on and on, but the point is clear.

As a result of the gynocentric system, you don’t even have to be within 100 miles of a woman to be jailed for raping her. No evidence is required, and you can rest assured that women will work hard to keep on eliminating any rules for evidence, due process, or rights for any man.

In these #metoo examples, the women are taking full advantage of the current system (They gynocracy, and the white knights and simps that enable it) to get attention, cover for cheating, extort money, gain power, and revenge. And, since feminists see themselves as superior beings, and that men are garbage (#killallmen, #thefutureisfemale), they see no problem in lying and destroying innocent men, particularly if they aren’t in the top 10-20%. These men, in the eyes of women, are not worthy of existing.

We must always remember that women never mature past middle school. They are as cruel and vindictive at 54 as they are at 14. And, perhaps even more so, as they will be more miserable and bitter at that age.

AWALT is real-it always has been. It is the true state of all women, and the recent election only shows that they are going to be encouraged more and more to use lies to destroy men. GYOW is more necessary than ever before.

---

Archived from theredarchive.com

---

Comments

---