

Women and antidepressants

December 26, 2016 | 1 upvotes | by empatheticapathetic

Recently a post showed up on my Facebook where a girl from my social circle was talking about her antidepressants. Then suddenly a bunch (10+) of women from my social circle joined in and mentioned either their specific antidepressants and experience or that they used to be on them until very recently, but most were still actively taking them.

Maybe I'm naive but I had no idea all these Fucking women were on anti depressants. How common is this generally? Ftr most of these girls are always in relationships but they're all definitely crazy. This social group although quite large (probably 100+) is definitely low value in terms of where they are on the social ladder and attractiveness of both men and women.

Archived from theredarchive.com

Comments

[deleted] • 3 points • 26 December, 2016 03:41 AM bitches get on antidepressants because they think it will fix their natural lack of ambition.

user_none • 2 points • 26 December, 2016 05:55 AM

Or deals with an event in life, not by confronting it head on, but by masking with pills to escape.