

Filed for divorce today, lawyer told me to stop any relations with any women. This is going to be a long 60 days.

So I officially filed for divorce today. We have been separated for a long time, she's knocked up, it's a mess. Despite that, everything is pretty amicable, but my lawyer said in order to make sure there are no problems at any point during the process I can't have a girlfriend. I was just fine with that until she elaborated to explain I couldn't hook up or have any relations at all. This is gonna be rough as shit, but I plan to use the time to focus on building myself. I lift 5 days a week already, and do cardio in the evening (overweight, but lost 60lbs already and working hard to get rid of the rest) I run a car dealership for a living, so I plan to spend extra time working as well. Who else has been through the big D (and I don't mean Dallas) and found other great ways to improve themselves during their forced monk mode?

2 months is easy. I spent years sexless.

Dude, do not use a female lawyer for your divorce!

Get a male lawyer. I cannot stress this point strongly enough.

I'm seeing it on another forum i'm on.

Two divorce threads. One guy has a male lawyer the other guy has a female lawyer.

The guy with the male lawyer, the lawyer is treating this like a competition to destroy the opposing lawyer and win this case. He is absolutely destroying her female lawyer who is way out of her depth and should be disbarred for her incompetence. Missing deadlines, hamstering, it's insane how bad she is as a lawyer.

The other guy with the female lawyer, his ex is still living in his house 11 months later and he thinks he only has one more month to wait. She has no job, just totalled her car, insurance wont cut her a check so she is stuck in his house and he can't get rid of her. He thinks being nice and waiting it out will work. I have shown him google searches that shows the information his female lawyer has given him as blatantly wrong. It even says that the judge in his state/county is unlikely to grant the divorce because they are living separately in the same house and it's her word against his. But he is so far invested that he's struggling to change course.

I'd bet money the advice you can't fuck other women is totally wrong.

Women always look out for other women in a divorce and ethics are not a female strong point.

This is true. Ever notice how women are always projecting? Take their accusations that men favor other men as an admission of guilt that they do the same but with other women.

Kommanderdude • 2 points • 14 April, 2017 02:33 PM

This is true. My ltr is an attorney and constantly bitches about how men just don't take her seriously and how all the older attorneys she deals with in court have a good ol boys club and act like she doesn't exist. The only male attorneys she can get along with are under 30 and cucked.

It might be a little unpleasant. Is it worse than ruining your fucking life? I thought not. Not being able to keep your dick in your pants when you have to is the number one way guys fuck up their lives.

Well, yeah, I mean obviously it's not worth what it will cost me to not just abstain for a few weeks, but that wasn't really the question...

machimus • -1 points • 14 April, 2017 03:28 AM

You really can't think of anything to do with yourself? Bruh. I think you just wanted sympathy.

AmlanceJockey • points • 14 April, 2017 06:49 AM [recovered]

Even if all he wants is some sympathy that's not a bad thing. Trp ain't a hug box, but for many of us it's the only place we can openly talk redpill.

machimus • 1 point • 14 April, 2017 05:51 PM

I don't mean to seem cold. It's just that he obviously already knows what he should do...and so often on this sub guys want to "talk it out" instead of taking action.

You clearly skimmed this post without actually reading it. I obviously don't need anybody to help me figure out how to not just sit here and twiddle my thumbs. I am asking other people who have been in a situation where they had to swear off women for a while what different ways they found to self improve in the meantime. Don't be an asshat.

Having gone through this recently myself; read, lift, read, work on the car, read, work on the house/apt., read, go for a bike ride, go to the movies/park/museum/new restaurant. Pick up a new hobby, there's a lot more to do than you think, make yourself busy. Get off of the internet, it's a time waster. Can pretty much guarantee that it's going to be longer than a few weeks.

Thank you for the suggestions. I sure hope the 60 days the attorney estimated is correct though. I'd hate for it to take any longer than that. It's uncontested, and very amicable at the moment. That should go a long way with keeping the time line, i hope.

summervijx • 1 point • 14 April, 2017 02:45 PM

Just FYI, mine was amicable as well, but it's funny how stuff keeps coming up. Going on almost a year now.

salezman12[S] • 1 point • 14 April, 2017 02:49 PM

Oh man, don't tell me that. If you don't mind my asking, what is taking so long?

summervijx • 1 point • 14 April, 2017 04:47 PM

Mostly just typical AWALT, going from agreeing to something and then changing her mind depending on her emotional state.

salezman12[S] • 2 points • 14 April, 2017 04:50 PM

Ah. Women, you can't live with'em, and they can't pee standin up.

Westernhagen • 1 point • 14 April, 2017 02:33 PM

Lotta men with dead bedrooms would respond, "No relations at all? Been there done that. That's why the divorce is happening in the first place. Two months of no relations after years of it is nothing."

LaLongCarabine • 1 point • 14 April, 2017 06:38 PM

Monk Mode, make it about you. Come out the other end a completely transformed man.

cdogg75 • 1 point • 15 April, 2017 01:26 AM

I am sure you stopped relations with your wife long ago, what's 60 more days of no relations at all? Gym and reading time bro.
