

How things work.

Dalrock | 27 January, 2018 | by Dalrock

One of Cane Caldo's readers suggested that feminists are likely to complain that he hasn't made his case regarding the term bastard with sufficient detail. Cane responded:

I can live with that and refuse to explain things to Feminists anyways. Explaining the realities of civilization to Feminists is like explaining the internal combustion engine to Feminists: You will talk about the need for a proper mixture of fuel, air, and spark and they will come back with a demand for a bigger pink key because everyone knows its keys that make cars go.

They don't lack explanations. That's not their problem.

Archived from theredarchive.com