

It gets better.

Dalrock | 21 November, 2014 | by Dalrock

In my last post I pointed out the irony of feminist Jessica Wakeman wanting her nieces to play pediatric oncologist Barbie when she herself worked for a gossip site. Why constantly try to steer her nieces away from focusing on hair, beauty, fashion, and relationships (like the blog she wrote for) and towards career choices she wasn't interested in enough to follow herself?

It turns out that Wakeman has recently left her post at The Frisky, and moved instead to YouBeauty.com:

I don't think that blogging about hair and skin care and beauty will be easy by any means, but I'm pretty sure it won't make me cry!

Archived from theredarchive.com